Dear Hiring Manager,

I am applying for an elementary school teaching position, and I want to start by saying something simple — I really love being around kids. Not in a way that sounds good on paper, but in the way where I genuinely look forward to walking into a classroom every morning.

I'm currently working as a substitute teacher at Hillsborough School District in New Jersey, and it has been one of the most meaningful experiences of my life. Every classroom I step into teaches me something new — about how children learn, what they need to feel settled and safe, and how a little consistency and warmth can completely change the energy of a room.

I'm also a mom of two boys, one in high school and one in middle school. Raising them has given me a front-row seat to child development that no course could fully replicate. I've watched them grow, struggle, figure things out, and surprise me. That experience lives in how I show up in the classroom every day.

I believe in keeping things simple — clear routines, a warm environment, high expectations delivered with kindness. I connect with kids quickly, I stay calm when things get hard, and I genuinely enjoy the work. I'm organized, I'm consistent, and I care about every child in the room — not just the ones who are easy to reach.

I also come from a background in software quality engineering, which has made me thorough, detail-oriented, and good at working within a team. I bring those same habits into how I plan, prepare, and communicate with the people around me.

I would love the chance to be part of your school community. Thank you so much for taking the time to read this.

Warmly,

Kavitha Pannala
